ROCKAIR

Surfboard protection for flights

Rockair is premium in-bag protection for surfboards that travel by air. Every year surfers hand their favourite boards to baggage handlers and simply hope for the best. Rockair replaces that hope with a high-density foam shield that wraps the board from nose to tail and slides straight into a board bag, their own or the Rockair Ultralight. No bulky hard case. No wasted space. No opening the bag at the destination to find a fresh ding. Because your board deserves better than cardboard and bubble wrap.

A light fabric carrier built around the shells. Three Rockair shells carry the protection, so the case does not have to. It takes up to three shells, each with one S extension fitted, and slings over the shoulder.

Size & Fit Guide

Finding the right Rockair takes two steps: the board width selects the shell, and the board length selects the extensions.

- Width — boards up to 20" wide use the Short Shell; boards 20" to 22" wide use the Hybrid Shell; boards up to 24" wide use the Longboard Shell.
- Thickness — the Short and Hybrid Shells take boards up to 6 cm thick, the Longboard Shell up to 7 cm. A thicker board will not close properly, whatever its length and width.
- Length — match the board length in the tables below to see which extensions to add. Up to two extensions can be combined.
- Maximum board — 9'11" long x 24" wide, using at most two extensions.
